

Alexandria Gazette.

THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 24, 1882.

INFLUENCE OF NEWSPAPERS.—A school-teacher, who had been a long time in his profession, and witnessed the influence of a newspaper upon the minds of a family of children, writes as follows:

I have found it to be a universal fact; without exception, that those scholars of both sexes and of all ages who have access to newspapers at home, when compared with those who have not, are:

1. Better readers, excellent in pronunciation, and consequently read more and understandingly.

2. They are better spellers, and define words with ease and accuracy.

3. They obtain a practical knowledge of Geography in almost half the time it requires others, as the newspapers have made them acquainted with the location of the important places, of nations, their government and doings on the globe.

4. They are better grammarians, for having become so familiar with every variety of style in the newspapers, from the common place advertisement to the finishing and classical oration of statesmen, they more readily comprehend the meaning of the text, and consequently analyze its construction with accuracy.

5. They write better compositions, using better language, containing more thoughts—more clearly and correctly expressed.

6. Those young men who have for years been readers of newspapers are always taking the lead in debating societies, exhibiting a more extensive knowledge upon a greater variety of subjects, and expressing their views with greater fluency, clearness and correctness.

EXEMPTION FROM VERMIN.—The following antidote for fleas, mosquitoes and other small deer, by an English physician, is worth a trial:

"I have never found the following receipt fail, and I have traveled in many very flea-bitten, bug-bitten and mosquito-bitten countries. I adopted the following antidote, formed on what I heard of as being done in Hungary, a land much vexed in the summer time by fleas and so on: I oiled myself all over, from head to foot, with the best sweet or olive oil, and these parts of my back that I could not get at myself I oiled for me by the help of a friend or of a servant. Rub the oil well in with the palm of your hand over the whole body, head, face and all, in a warm room, before a fire if possible, in case it be winter, time, and you may—such is my experience, and without this precaution I am a martyr to fleas—defy either flea, bug or mosquito. It is quite a mistake to suppose that oiling oneself with sweet oil is a nasty, dirty operation. The oil sinks into the skin at once, and does not stain either cotton or linen. The only effect is that you feel very little and supple (the Greeks and Romans knew what they were after when they oiled themselves before gymnastic exercises), and it enables you to defy the murderous—or at least the sanguinary—attacks of your creeping, crawling and skipping enemies."

[If the remedy is not regarded as worse than the torment of the insects, it may be remarked that mosquitoes have quite an antipathy to coal oil, and if people would anoint their faces and hands with the same previous to retiring at night they would render themselves impervious to the bites of these pests.]
